Robert,

I believe this is ready. I have changed the start date giving the council the ability to start this term in April, given that we have actually been out of contract since September.

Also attached is a chart that is a side by side comparison of the changes from the previous agreement to the new one we are proposing.

Thanks,

Summary

During the unprecedented freeze, there were a considerable number of pieces of equipment damaged. Inframark has identified the need for many pieces of equipment to be repaired or replaced. The equipment status can significantly compromise the plants' abilities to meet environmental compliance at the WWTP, and drinking water standards for the Distribution system. Inframark would like to have a State of Emergency declared.

Damages

Wastewater Treatment Plant

A hard freeze affected the Sludge Transfer Vault causing several leaks and the flooding of the vault which resulted in the inability to get solids to the belt press. Due to this inability to get solids to the belt press, the solids of the WWTP will eventually build up and cause the inability to treat the WWTP as well as compliance issues with Oklahoma Department of Environmental Quality. The hard freeze also affected the fire hydrant outside press building.

- Major electrical damage to Motors and electrical systems i.e. Breakers, switches, controls.

- Pumps cases froze and cracked.

- Other items include cracked swing check, pipework that has pushed apart.

- There could also be potential damage to the transfer line going to the press building (yet to be determined).

- Fire hydrant froze and began to leak profusely.

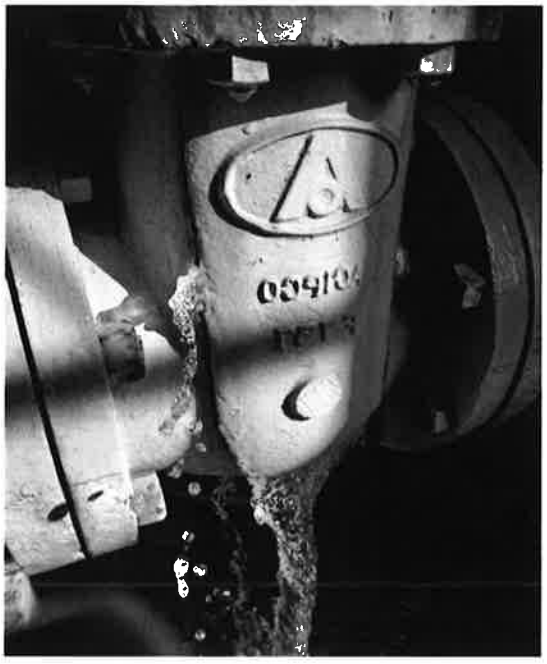

Distribution:

The Foss pump station had two 10" valves freeze and break, before and after pump (any damages to pump have not been confirmed yet). The reason for these emergency repairs at Foss is the water leaks could affect the operation of the current operating pump. If not addressed, the water damage could spread to the electrical into the room and cause more damage. It is important to get these repairs completed as fast as possible.
